Consent for biometric fingerprinting

As part of its legal and regulatory obligations in terms of security, Geneva Airport must put in place all necessary and appropriate measures to ensure that all persons wishing to enter the security restricted area have the right to do so. Employees working on the airport must hold an Airport Identity Card (AIC) authorising them to enter this area. The AIC must be checked (in particular for validity, authorised areas, etc.) each time the employee enters the security zone, and Geneva Airport must ensure that the person presenting the card is in fact its holder.

At present, AICs are checked by security staff; this will continue to be the case in the future. However, in order to facilitate entry to the security area, Geneva Airport has introduced a new automatic control system at certain access points reserved for AIC holders. In order to ensure that the AIC presented actually belongs to the person wishing to enter the security zone, the automatic checks must use biometric data.

Data processing and storage

In addition to the personal data processed for obtaining and using the AIC, the following additional personal data are processed for automated checks:

- Fingerprints

This data is only stored on the physical AIC card and no copy is kept in Geneva Airport's IT systems, nor in any other system. When the AIC card is scanned at a control point, the system will only check that the biometric data on the AIC card matches that of the person wishing to enter the security area. The biometric data is not recorded. The data is not transmitted to third parties.

Biometrics must be used in order to use the automatic passageways; otherwise, access to the security zone will only be possible via the passageways guarded by an agent. Consent may be withdrawn at any time by contacting the Access Process Group, in which case the biometric data will be deleted from the AIC.

We ask you to tick one of the options below:

- I agree that my biometric data listed above may be collected and used for the purposes and within the framework detailed above.
- I refuse to allow my biometric data listed above to be collected and used for the purposes and within the framework detailed above.
